Study of Canine Lymphoma

The most common type of cancer in dogs is lymphoma, with ~80,000 cases diagnosed annually in the United States. The University of Washington and the AKC Canine Health Foundation are recruiting dogs to participate in a study that examines the frequency of precancerous somatic (non-inherited) mutations in white blood cells. This work could lead to the development of new tests for the early diagnosis and improved prognosis of canine lymphoma.

Recruiting specific breeds to participate: German Shepherd, Boxer, Dalmatian, Chow Chow, Alaskan Malamute, German Shorthaired Pointer. Dogs can be of any age or sex and must NOT have a history of lymphoma.

Participation involves a simple blood draw from your dog, and owners will be asked to complete a brief environmental questionnaire.

A collection table will be set up at the health clinic at the WIKC shows on the weekend of 5/22-5/23.

Please contact Sandi Shrager at 206-919-8103 or sandis@uw.edu to schedule a time for blood collection. Strict safety protocols will be followed, and the blood draw will be performed by a licensed veterinarian or licensed veterinary technician.
